

Activity Typology: Cooperative Challenge

Material: Various balls

Description of the activity:

All people participating in the game are part of the same team. People are listed (from 1 to the last number of people playing). The challenge is to pass the ball in the established order, i.e. the 1 passes to 2, 2 to 3,... Until the last participant receives the ball and passes it to the first one. In addition, a rule is added: all people have to be moving through the playing space, not forgetting to respect the minimum safety distance.

The main objective is to play with the maximum number of balls circulating among all the participants of the challenge, without losing the order of the passes, without the balls falling to the ground and with all the people moving through space.

The person who energizes the challenge has to be progressively introducing the balls.

Variantes:

- V1: Enter and combine different types of balls (basketball, rugby, tennis...).
- V2: Vary the way you pass the ball (with bounce, with both hands, above the head...).
- V3: Enter slogans according to the color or type of the ball: balls of one color are passed with the right hand and those of another color with the left; or some balls are passed with their hands and others with their feet; or depending on the type of ball is passed one way or another.

Questions for reflection:

- Did you enjoy the challenge?
- What action did you find most complicated? How did you cope?
- What value do you think has been most important in this challenge?
- In what other spaces do you put this value into practice? At home, at school, on the street, on public transport...?
- In what situations does this value hold importance?
